The Belgrade Fortress was built as a defensive structure on a ridge overlooking the confluence of the Sava and the Danube during the period from the 1st to the 18th century. Today, the fortress is a unique museum of the history of Belgrade. The complex is made up of the Belgrade Fortress itself, divided into the Upper and Lower Towns (Gornji/Donji grad) and the Kalemegdan Park. The Kalemegdan Park is in the city center and easily reached from Knez Mihailova Street (pedestrian street).

My name is Skadarlija... or Skadarska street, however you like it. I am no boulevard... nor avenue... nor highway. I am common steep curved alley in the middle of Belgrade. And that would be everything meaningful to be told about me if it wouldn’t be for my bohemian history, my crumbling roofs, my shaking chairs...

—Zuko Đumhur

Once you have experienced Belgrade’s Bohemian spirit, your further exploration of the city will be much easier and more enjoyable.

Vračar plateau is one of the highest points in downtown Belgrade, and its name is taken after Serbian word “vrač”, meaning the medicine man, healer, medicos. Almost no geographical features survive today as the area is completely urbanized, except for the small section of Karađorđev Park on the southern slopes of the plateau. The most dominant feature of modern Vračar is the massive Temple of Saint Sava.

ZEMUN This part of Belgrade is situated along the right bank of the Danube. For most of its history, it developed separately from the Belgrade, which lies across the Sava River, but development of New Belgrade in the late 20th century joined them together in a continuous urban area. Walks through Zemun will give you completely different experience than the other parts of Belgrade, not only considering architecture, but the spirit, atmosphere and river facilities.
